as Arbor day in Vermont this year, mont by Mrs. W. P. Smith. Barton is in the warrant and indictment. The as will be seen by the following proclamation issued by Gov. John A.

Mead: STATE OF VERMONT EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. ARBOR DAY PROCLAMATION

The coming of spring is the year's crowned hour. Our hills and valleys, warmed by golden suns and refreshed by silver showers, respond to the plan of nature's God we will look out upon a wilderness of green.

The foliage of tree and vine, the emerald tints of growing grass, the unfolding bud and the full blossomed flower yield a wide spread panorama of field and forest, rich with the choicest offerings of the year.

No dream of the artist, no touch of his brush, approach in grandeur and beauty the work of the Divine Master, who painted the shrub and conceived the colorings which melt and blend in the bosom of the flower.

to add to the happiness of mankind. Therefore, I, John A. Mead, governor of Vermont, do hereby designate Friday, May the fifth, A. D., nineteen hundred and eleven, as Arbor day, and recommend that it be observed by suitable and appropriate exercises in our schools and in public places.

Let every person plant a tree or shrub, a vine or flower, along some private park.

Pardon for Sargood Refused.

State's Attorney W. J. Meagher, of

Bennington, has received word from Gov. John A. Mead, of Rutland that the petition for a pardon in the case of Eugene G. Sargood, now confined at the state prison at Windsor on the charge of attempting to poison Mr. and Mrs Hicks of Arlington, has been refused. The case of Sargood was one of the most sensational ever tried in Bennington county court. He was convicted of three offenses, for poisoning live stock, for attempting to cause the death of his neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, by the same means and for perjury. While he was serving the sentence for his first conviction he was taken to Bennington from prison for other trials. The minimum sentences in the three corvictions amounted to 155 years. All three cases were appealed to the srpreme court which, in May, 1906, confirmed the conviction in the two poisoning cases but remanded the perjury case back to county court for retrial. The perjury case was never retried and after Sargood has completed the sentence of 31 years for poisoning stock an attempt was made to secure his release on the ground that he was being illegally restrained. His counsel contended that the perjury conviction followed that for poisoning stock; that there had never been any final verdict in the second case; and that his client should, therefore be released Arguments were made before the United States district court ing the standard of all Vermont herds glass and removing the entire pane, by James K. Later he has had charge of the prison barber Horticulture is the latest movement shop for the officials and has done similar work for the prisoners.
